

Powerful Presentations

Information alone doesn't persuade people; strong presentation skills do. This site helps both the aspiring and veteran speaker develop strong and powerful presentation skills.

- Home
- Free Newsletter/Stuff
- Special Reports
- Free Articles
- Editor's Bio
- Creative Keys
- Storytelling Power

"A presentation is your opportunity to shine or blow it. I've seen careers take quantum jumps as a result of a good

How to Craft an Effective Elevator Speech

by Chris King

I know that at this moment, you are wondering what I'm talking about. Who gives a speech in an elevator anyway? What I mean by an "elevator speech" is a short description of what you do, or the point you want to make, presented in the time it takes an elevator to go from the top floor to the first floor or vice versa. In this article you will find out what, why, where, when, to whom, and how to prepare that "elevator speech."

What exactly is an "elevator speech"? I believe the name was actually coined from the idea that we sometimes meet the important people in our lives in elevators. The odd situation we encounter in most elevators is that nobody speaks to or looks at anyone else, and yet we have a captive audience for that short period of time. Very few people are ready to interact in case someone does speak. The idea of an "elevator speech" is to have a prepared presentation that grabs attention and says a lot in a few words. What are you going to be saying? By telling your core message, you will be marketing yourself and/or your business, but in a way that rather than putting people off will make them want to know more about you and your business.

Why prepare an "elevator speech"? In previous articles I have continually mentioned the importance of preparation, and it is no different for an "elevator speech." Actually, it is imperative to work on this two to three minute presentation until it is perfectly crafted. This is

How to Leave Your Audience Begging for MORE!

Audience Begging for MORE!

In this complete manual by been-there-done-that author, Chris King, you will learn everything you need to know to become an OUTRAGEOUSLY Powerful Presenter!

Don't wait another day to get started.

You will be glad you did!

We hope that you are learning some new and effective presentation skills from this site, but also are having fun while here.

The speaker needs to be SHARP and have STYLE.

By developing your own personal and professional STYLE, you will live your life on purpose - with class, pleasure and success in every area.

performance,
or receive severe setbacks
for poor performances."
Thomas Leech

the one kind of speech that I do suggest memorizing. Make it such a part of you that if someone woke you up from a sound sleep in the middle of the night, and asked you what you do, you would smoothly and without hesitation tell them your "elevator speech." This speech will serve as your introduction to others, so it has to be good!

Where and when do I use this "elevator speech"? Of course, if you meet someone who shows interest in the elevator, you can be literal and use it there. But usually it comes in handy when you attend an event, a conference, a convention, or some other type of meeting with networking opportunities. You will notice that one of the first questions people ask is, "And, what do you do?" "Oh, I'm a lawyer ... or an accountant ... or a consultant ... or an artist..." It doesn't matter because they will often say, "Oh, that's nice," and immediately label you in their mind with all of the stereotypes they perceive those occupations carry with them. However, if you turn your message around and start with an answer like, "I work with small businesses that are grappling with computer problems," right away — especially if they own a small business — their ears will perk up and they will want to know more. The reason I suggest working on this speech and memorizing it is that our natural reaction to the question, "What do you do?" is to answer with a label. Then, we continue to describe the process we go through instead of sharing the benefits they will get from working with us. Rather than thinking of ourselves as "solution providers" we picture ourselves as doing our occupation.

To whom do I present my "elevator speech"? The more often you give your short speech, the better it will become. You will have so much fun experiencing the unique reactions to what you are saying, you will easily be able to add enthusiasm and energy to the telling. I suggest taking advantage of a wide variety of gatherings and networking events. And, don't worry, if your "elevator speech" isn't smooth, easy, or natural in the beginning. If you stick with it, you will find that it gets better and better, and before long, you will be getting a surprising amount of business — or, at least a number of contacts who want your business card and to stay in touch. You will also be remembered.

How do I craft my elevator speech? What

We have created a Special Report, 125 Ways to Develop Your Personal and Professional STYLE. Click HERE for more information.

And don't hesitate to send us your questions, comments, tips, and suggestions. We welcome your FEEDBACK.

101 Secrets of Highly Effective Speakers In 101 Secrets of Highly Effective

Speakers, Caryl Rae Krannich Ph.D offers hands on, reader-friendly, practical ideas that will help develop the skills and confidence necessary for a successful presentation.

Speaker's Sourcebook II: Quotes, Stories, & Anecdotes for Every

Occasion The Speaker's Sourcebook II remains a favorite source of reference, inspiration and information. The author pours a lot of himself in the messages following the anecdotes and stories. This is like a large Chicken Soup book with ideas for speakers.

Great Session Openers, Closers, and Energizers

Here's everything a speaker or trainer needs to keep the audience awake, alert, and involved. This fun-filled collection of can't-miss activities contains the openers, closers, and energizers you can use to are the ingredients? Before I go any further, I want to credit the man who turned me on to how to market using a strong core message, which I am calling my "elevator speech." It is Robert Middleton who calls himself an InfoGuru and who has developed an Action Plan Marketing Manual — which is not only reasonably priced, but loaded with incredible information. You will find him HERE. Even if you don't get his online manual, be sure to subscribe to his weekly newsletter, which is excellent. To start your "elevator speech" determine your niche market, what problem(s) do they have that you can help solve and what solution is the outcome? What makes you unique? What short story illustrates a successful outcome that you have produced?

For example, this is my elevator speech: Everyone has a story. I help small businesses and non-profits tell their story to the people who need to hear it. You see, when someone knows our story, they can't help but like us, and we support and do business with those we like. So, together, we craft your story and start telling it to your employees, the media, potential clients, and to the world. I know it sounds like marketing, but what makes me unique is that first and foremost, I am a storyteller. I also have a technical, art, writing, and design background which I combine to tell your story in a special, get-their-attention way. I recently completed a sixteen-page publication with an additional 15,000 copies that appeared in the March issue of Cleveland Magazine telling the stories of Cleveland's community development corporations. They were so delighted with the outcome that I am now in the process of designing an extensive website for them.

To learn more details about giving a smashing "elevator speech" that guarantees results, check out this Special Reports page.

kick off each presentation.

Secrets of Successful Speakers: Motivate, Captivate, and Persuade

How do highly paid professional speakers put magic and motivation into every talk? Lilly Walters reveals their secrets and strategies in this practical, conversational guide. Mark Twain reputedly said it took him three weeks to prepare an impromptu speech

In The Spotlight: Overcome Your Fear

In The SpotLight is a real gift to people experiencing any degree of fear or discomfort in speaking or performing in front of others, either in formal or informal settings. Janet Esposito demonstrates sensitivity and wisdom.

Remember:

If you would like to try an issue of our FREE eclectic e-newsletter, Portfolio Potpourri, sign up by clicking HERE and hitting SEND. Just for trying it, you will receive "10 Tips of Ways to Develop Your Personal and Professional STYLE."

We never sell names and/or e-mail addresses, and if you ever wish to "opt-out" that's never a problem.

Contact Chris King at:
chris@creativekeys.net
or at: P.O. Box 221255
Beachwood, Ohio 44122
Phone: (216) 991-8428

Home / Free Newsletter/Stuff / Special Reports
/
Free Articles / Editor's Bio / Ask Questions /
Creative Keys /
Storytelling Power / Chris Recommends